Landon R. Mayer is a nationally reputed fly fishing guide living in Woodland Park, who calls the South Platte River where he started guiding thirteen years ago his home waters. He has also been a guide in Alaska. Landon will be sharing techniques and secrets from his recently released book, Sight Fishing for Trout.

Passion and love for the sport of fly fishing motivate Landon, and his success in catching trout is fueled by an addiction of pursuing large trout with small flies and lightweight fly-fishing equipment. Landon also displays enthusiasm in teaching and demonstrating his techniques and on-river knowledge to fellow anglers, and he has developed innovative techniques for hooking and landing selective trout.

Landon's other current media include How to Catch the Biggest Trout of your Life (2007) and his DVDs Landing the Trout of Your Life (2007) and Weapons of Bass Production (2008) featuring John Barr. Landon is also a contributing writer for High Country Angler, Fly Fisherman, and American Angler.
